

Prestigious Accolade for Celenio Wood Tile Hamberger Wins AIT Innovation Award “Architecture and Floor”

Hanover – A special accolade was presented to Hamberger at the 9th AIT Innovation Award “Architecture and Floor” at this year's Domotex trade show. Hamberger Flooring received the “Special Award” in the “Product of High Architectural Quality” category for its Celenio wood tile in the new Papyrus Onyx design. Celenio – the innovation made of wood – was one of ten products to be nominated for the coveted award among the huge number of contestants. The jury consisting of renowned architects and interior designers was impressed with both the authentic application of the Harolith mono-material and the rich warm character of the product, which is made of the renewable resource wood. All participating products were showcased in the ‘contractworld’ special exhibition at the Domotex, and the award winners were selected in three categories. The prestigious accolade underlines Hamberger's great power of innovation.

The architecture and design contest was initiated with the aim to award a prize to those of the many floor coverings on the market that particularly meet the special demands and requirements of architects. The Innovation Award is divided into ten prizes and awards presented by the architecture magazines AIT, ABIT and XIA Intelligente Architektur.
