

Showing character Innovative interior designs with cork floors

Home offices or living rooms, corridors or attic studios, bedrooms or children's rooms – a modern cork floor is perfect for almost every residential area, as proven by the HARO 2009 cork floor range. HARO is consequently underscoring its claim as a full range provider in the hard-surface floor area. The floor specialist is now giving this natural material, cork, a new image with fresh modern designs. Whether robust and trendy like a laminate floor or as natural as parquet, the cork floor combines these special features in a very special way.

Functional design

Cork is an impressive material in terms of ecology, building biology and ergonomics. It offers pleasant foot warmth, is extremely durable against all kinds of stresses, and achieves perfect heat and sound insulation. With its high elasticity, the floor has a relieving effect on the joints and spine with every step. HARO, the parquet specialist, now brings two worlds together: an absolutely innovative product is provided with the combination of a wood design surface finish and the warmth and softness of cork.

Is it cork or is it wood?

Well, they certainly are natural, that's for sure! HARO presents cork floors with digitally printed surface finishes in wood designs. Arteo is available as Stripes, Oak, Oak grey or Walnut. With its modern look in the fingerstrips parquet design, Arteo Stripes will easily win over all lovers of classic industrial architecture.

Naturalness & modernity

A modern ambience and a natural floor do not exclude one another, as demonstrated by the Lagos HARO cork floor with its combination of flat cork specks and structured cork granulate. In the new white and coffee colours, the designated parquet specialist now also caters for the bright and dark design trends with its cork floor range.
